The proprietors of this work impressed with the opinion that independently of abstruse and learned treaties, there is an ample demand, on the part of the reading public, for literary matter of a higher denomination than the new works of fiction, which are at presents o prodigally disseminated among them, and for booke that shall have a higher aim than the mere amusement and gratification of the idle; he feels assured also that with a moderate degree of care and research, selections may easily be made as every man must feel in the real parties in every State in the Union concentrate in the speeches of each session of Congress, the mind, the infermation, and the feelings of every portion of our country. The political history of the country, for the time being, is not only spoken and written out in Congress, at each session, but the designs of every party, or fragment of a party, are developed, and the future tendency of the government itself degree of care and research, selections may easily be made as every man must feel in the real horizons.

These remarkable and deep'y interesting Trials have been collected from all the best sources which the public and private laborates of this country afford. The numbers will embrace many previous cases furnished exclusively by the London Annual Register, and recourse has been had occasionally to manuscripts where printed documents could not be procured.

Were Constable's Miscellary current in the United States perhaps the publisher of the present series would not have found it expedient to commence the latter work. But, be it remembered, that in speaking of the cheapness of Constable it labut relatively—as compared with the publications in Great Britain generally—which is dearer than that of any part of the world. Constable's Miscellany is published at about half the English rate, but the present work proposes to be at about one third even of Constable.

It is to introduce to the reading public, a series of works that shall blend entertainment with information—that shall take off the edge of the voraceous appetite for mere fiction, which has been brought on by too great a profusion of works of that description—that shall gradually form a collection of works of that description—that shall gradually form a collection of works of that description—that shall gradually form a collection of works of that description—that shall gradually form a collection of works of that description—that shall gradually form a collection of works of that description—that shall gradually form a collection of works of the compare with a more great public, their many to compare with a more great public, their many to compare with a more great public, their many to compare with a more great public, their many to compare with a more great public, their many to compare with a more great public, their many to compare with a more great public, their many to compare with a more great public, their many that is a mental to the public of the compared with a more great public. day, or to compare with a more recent writer; that may be an ornament to any private library or collection; and that shall be cheaper than ever has been issued.

The works collected into Foster's Cabinet Miscellany, will be in every range of polite literature. It is intended to suit, as much as possible, every taste, and by an agreeable variety of subjects as well as styles, to keep up a healthy excitement for rational entertainment. Works of great length, of severe and deep investigation, and of the more abstrace eciences will, of course, find no place here. It is of the cheerful, elegant and easy writings of the day, that the selections will be made; always keeping in view, that only substantially good works will be introduced; in order to which the publisher will use every means to satisfy himself, before he commits a work to press.

It is trusted that the Cabinet Miscellany will be a melange. It is trusted that the Cabinet Miscellany will be a melange of all that is valuable in modern literature; it will assure illy be the medium of introducing works which would hardly find their the niction of introducing works which would narray and their way to the American public generally, through any other source. It will present them at prices varying from one fourth to one sixth and in some cases even one-eighth of the English coat;—and the execution, it is hoped, will meet with general approval.

Eleventh Annual Report of the Bourd of Manugers of the Prison Discipline Society .-United States, Indians included, amounts (as with a detail of facts respecting Asylums for poor nearly as could be ascertained in 1836) to Lunatics. The Governor of Maine stated in his message for January, 1836, that the sum of twenty thousand dollars had been raised by individual donations for the establishment of an Insane Hospital. An eligible site on the east bank of the Kennebec river in Augusta, has been purchased for this purpose.

The agent for the building writes in May, 1836, that the work will probably be completed the next year. The plan adobted is that of the Worcester Hospital.

The subject is exciting great interest in New Hampshire and the expectation is cherished that anothed session of the Legislature will not pass without making legislative provision for the insane poor.

In Vermont it was ascertained that there are 144 msane persons. An act of their legislature in Nov. 1835 direct the State Treasurer to pay the trustees of the Vermont Asylum for the Insane, $2000 per annum for five years; provided however, that none is to be paid, until the building is erected and ready to receive natients.
